

Abstract

A method and system for capturing and managing electronic notes in a computer based application is presented. Electronic notes are captured in a note object and the context of the captured note is associated to the note object. Note objects are stored in a notes database for later retrieval. The notes can be queried, filtered, and sorted to obtain useful information from the notes.

5